AN APE IN REGIMENTALS.

I was talking with an old West Indian ex-plantation, a man not long past his three score years and ten, who left Jamaica somewhere in the '60s.

"I see," said he, "that there is some talk of raising Sir John Macdonald's widow to the peerage. If it should prove true, she will be the first native West Indian to come in for such an honour, at least in a great number of years. I do not remember that the story had happened before, although, I think, the composer, who received a baronetcy some time ago, was, like Lady Macdonald, a native of Jamaica."

"Yes," he continued, "I remember her father well. 'Monkey Bernard' they used to call him, and probably no white man, except Charles Darwin himself, the apostle of the monkey ancestral gospel, ever more closely resembled an ape in the face."

There was a young bird, however, who had a narrow escape from paying dearly for his laugh at Bernard's physiognomy. "John X. (that was not his name, but it will do as well as any other) was walking along Port Royal Street, Kingston, one fine morning, and a crowd of negroes attracted his attention. The centre of amusement proved to be a good-sized ape, which a Spanish sailor held by a rope fastened around his body."

"X. was at once struck by the likeness—so he told me—of the ape to his friend, who had the result that he then and there became the proprietor of the living caricature."

Bernard was a large planter and a man of some wealth, and his major's commission in the Jamaica militia. The fact was, he was a man of a grand inspection of the militia appointed to be held within a few weeks after his zoological investment of X. and the father of mischief prompted him to avail himself of an act of the most outrageous devilment. "He had the ape fitted with a complete suit of regimentals as worn by the major in the Jamaica militia, bought a little tin sword and spent hours in training the brute to walk upright with the drawn sword in his right hand."

"The crowd was well kept until the day of the review. Crowds of negroes surrounded the race-course just outside of Kingston, where the troops were to march. Presently Bernard's regiment marched on the ground and wheeled into line. At the same moment there was a shout from hundreds of lusty negro throats: 'Lookoo, Monkey Bernard!'"

And X.'s ape, brilliant in scarlet and white, with its tin sword shining, strutted and strutted toward the ranks. "I suppose that, with the exception of Bernard himself, there was not a man on that ground who was not convulsed with laughter. The military evolutions had to wait until the ape had been recaptured by X.'s groom."

"The diel had not quite gone out of fashion in those days, or at any rate not in Jamaica. Of course, apologetics would have been ridiculous, so X. had to accept Bernard's challenge. The weapon was a sword, and the ground was a level. At the same moment there was a shout from hundreds of lusty negro throats: 'Lookoo, Monkey Bernard!'" circumstances which preclude the use of 'intimations.' No doubt, there is much to be learned from the study of the ape, and the question is whether or not it is interference with nature is not likely to drive the ape in the deeper.

BEGIN IN TIME.

"This never too late to mend" is an old saying, very applicable in cases of reformation or having of bad habits, but in cases of disease, it is not so applicable, for it is not likely to drive the ape in the deeper.

Twentieth Volume. The Review discusses topics which are of importance in the study of the Far East, and of which about which every intelligent person concerned with China or Japan is desirous of acquiring trustworthy information. It includes many interesting Notes and original

Papers on the Arts, Sciences, Bibliography,

Religion, Geography, History, Literature,

Mythology, Natural History, Antiquities,

Social and Domestic Customs, etc., etc.,

of China, Japan, Mongolia, Tibet, and the Far East generally. Recently a new department has been added for the review of papers on Trade, Commerce, and Descriptive Notes of Travel by well-known writers. It was thought that by extending the scope of the Review in this direction,

the Magazine would be made more generally useful.

The Review department receives special attention, and endeavours are made to present a careful and concise record of literature on China, etc., and to give an accurate and complete account of the most recent works on the subject, and publishers are requested to forward works to "Editor, China Review, care of China
